Revmatic | Rising Of The Sword

REVMATIC has been described as "catchy with the blunt force impact of blue collar metal, more simplistic melodies that stay challenging when coupled with solid solos and leads. A steady, persistent backing section acts as a quickened pulse to propel the guitar theatrics. This band has a sound that's ready to burst from the underground into the mainstream."

In 2008 they released their album entitled "Cold Blooded Demon". As described by singer Nathan Yetter, “It is the sound of Guns ‘N’ Roses and Metallica in a car accident.” The album marked a new beginning and has gained many accolades on their solid sound, rhythm section and pure raw energy in their live shows.

In February 2014 REVMATIC released their first album in six years titled "Rising Of The Sword." Also, this is the first album to include Trevor Wilson on Guitar. The new album is rich with duel lead guitars, pounding bass guitar, and thunderous drumming. It’s like a drink of Hard Rock, with a twist of Metal, with no ice!!

The Heavy Metal Addiction website review said that the band is "High energy, raw, in your face, modern Heavy Metal & Hard Rock that you could hear on today's Rock radio" and Keith Bergman from blabbermouth.net stated "REVMATIC are definitely on their way to great things, and they're something the world needs more of — a radio-friendly hard rock band that doesn't forget their balls, or their distortion pedals, on the way to the studio.
